

a Blueprint

for a prosperous state

Building a better New Mexico

We all want a prosperous state, but prosperity requires investments. You can't grow a garden without good soil, sunlight, water, and some hard work. Same with a state—you can't have prosperity without resources, infrastructure, and a skilled workforce.

But instead of following an investment strategy to prosperity, New Mexico has tried to cut its way to prosperity. You could call this the “don't build it and let's hope they will come anyway” strategy. Or perhaps the “magical-thinking-of-trickle-down-economics” strategy.

This has been the wrong strategy for New Mexico.

Building a prosperous state will take a more sensible approach. If we could recoup the millions of dollars in tax breaks we're losing to well-connected special interests, we'd have money for the public investments our businesses and economy need. Investments like a well-educated and skilled workforce, state-of-the-art health care, up-to-date communications infrastructure, and affordable child care, to name just a few.

The path to a strong New Mexico begins with making smart investments. There are many common-sense ways to raise new money, create jobs, and bolster our economy:

• Repeal the 2013 corporate income tax cuts

The big corporate tax cut of 2013 cost more than expected, and it's also failed to create jobs. There is no excuse for keeping bad tax policy on the books and New Mexico lawmakers need to repeal this one.

- Could raise more than $100 million a year.

• Repeal the tax break for manufacturers

At the same time the corporate income tax rate was cut, the formula for how manufacturers were taxed was changed so that companies like Intel could get away without paying any taxes. But Intel has since cut jobs in New Mexico.

- Could raise $45 million a year.

• Raise the personal income tax rate for those at the top

In 2003 New Mexico cut the personal income tax rate by nearly half for the wealthiest households. As it is now, the wealthiest pay less of their income in state and local taxes than most of the rest of us. Meanwhile the GOP tax plan signed into law at the end of last year gave more tax cuts to the wealthy. Raising income tax rates for very-high income New Mexicans will raise much-needed revenues and help to turn our upside-down tax system right-side up.

- A full repeal of the 2003 cuts would raise $500 million.

• Curtail tax breaks for capital gains income

New Mexico taxes income from capital gains (profits from the sale of assets such as stocks or real estate) at half the rate that it taxes the wages of working people. This break mainly helps the wealthiest—those making over $200,000—while taking revenue away from much-needed public investments. It also helps make our tax system less fair.

- Could raise $44 million-$48 million in FY19.

a Blueprint for a prosperous state

- Repeal wasteful and ineffective tax breaks

There are hundreds of tax breaks that have been carved out of the gross receipts tax (GRT) base over the years, many of which simply qualify as a handout to special interests. What's more, few of them have ever been evaluated for effectiveness. Repealing wasteful and ineffective tax breaks will allow lawmakers to put that money to work in our schools and communities where it will benefit everyone.

- Could raise hundreds of millions.

- Require all out-of-state corporations to pay income tax on their profits in New Mexico

New Mexico is one of the few states that still allows out-of-state corporations to shift their New Mexico profits on paper to another state to avoid paying taxes here. We lose millions in revenue, and local businesses can't compete. A partial fix (called Mandatory Combined Reporting) was enacted in 2013, but it exempted many profitable corporations such as banks.

- Could raise $25 million.

- Increase the distribution from the Land Grant Permanent School Fund

New Mexico has the nation's second largest Land Grant Permanent School Fund, now with more than $16 billion. Legislators and voters could choose to increase the distribution of that fund, which would help us better fund K-12 schools and our higher education system, as well as invest a tiny portion in the early childhood education programs that will help our kids do better in school so more of them can attend college.

- Increasing the distribution by 2% provide an additional $300 million for education.

- Enact a health care provider assessment

Instead of facing cuts in Medicaid reimbursement rates, many health care providers are asking to be assessed a provider fee. The money collected could then be added to the state's Medicaid budget, allowing the state to draw down federal matching money and prevent additional cuts to health care services for children, the disabled, and elderly.

- Amount raised would vary depending on rates.

- Raise alcohol and tobacco taxes and include e-cigarettes

These taxes could both increase revenue and promote greater wellness, particularly when they act as a disincentive for young people to take up smoking.

- A tax increase of $1.50 a pack would raise an additional $90 million.
- An increase in the alcohol tax of 25-cents a drink could raise $154 million.

- Increase the tax on the sale of motor vehicles

New Mexico's excise tax on motor vehicles is lower than the general sales tax on most other goods purchased in the state. It's also lower than in surrounding states, and could stay lower even if it was increased.

- Could raise about $100 million.

- Extend the gross receipts tax to more internet sales

"Main street businesses"—those with a brick-and-mortar presence in New Mexico—pay gross receipts taxes on their internet sales here, but businesses without a physical location in the state don't. This exemption drains a lot of revenue from the state and puts local retailers at a competitive disadvantage.

- Could raise more than $25 million.

- Enact a new tax on diesel fuel

A large portion of this tax would be paid by out-of-state entities like interstate trucking companies.

- Amount raised would vary depending on rates.

Keeping New Mexico on track

By making some of these common-sense fixes to our state's tax code, New Mexico could be back on the path to making the investments that our businesses and communities need. But we also must make a change to ensure that we stay on track:

- Require a tax expenditure budget in statute

A tax expenditure budget allows legislators to see the hundreds of tax exemptions, deductions and credits they have enacted over the years. This makes it easier to review tax expenditures for their cost-effectiveness and repeal those that do not grow the economy. While the tax department does produce a tax expenditure budget under executive order, requiring one under state law would give legislators more authority over which expenditures are studied.
